La Cala de Mijas was an agricultural and fishing area until the beginning of the tourist boom in the 1960s. Four towers remained from its past that were part of the fortified line along the Andalusian Mediterranean coast, whose defensive function was to give warning . due to the presence of enemy ships so that the garrisons of Fuengirola, Benalmádena and Marbella, among others, went to the site where the Berber pirates attacked. One of the towers is in La Cala, the others are located in various developments in Mijas Costa. These towers are:

- Calahonda Tower (16th century), located in Calahonda.
- Torre Nueva de La Cala del Moral (probably the most modern tower on the entire coast, 19th century), located in the Torrenueva urbanization.
- La Cala del Moral Battery Tower (16th century), located in La Cala de Mijas, visitable.
- Calaburras Tower (built around 1515 in Punta de Calaburras), located in the El Faro Urbanization.
